

QUANTUM ENERGY HEALING

Thinking of Changing Career?

Distance healing could be part of the coming revolution in healthcare

1 There's career change and there's CAREER CHANGE - and Peter Ebdon knows all about the latter. After a successful career as a professional snooker player, Peter began a new profession - as an energy healer.

2 After retiring from snooker, Peter set up Quantum Energy Healing with experienced clinical acupuncturist and healer Jo Radley. The pair offer healing - not just to people, but also to horses.

3 Healing can be given in-person, as in being in the same room. Healers do not need to physically touch the people they are healing and because of that, healing can also be given remotely, over the phone or Zoom. This is Distance Healing.

How cool is that. Much better than a phone consultation with a GP - if you can get one of those these days! And GPs don't heal over the phone anyway.

Don't think this is funny though - since people wouldn't be doing this unless it worked. It may not work for a broken wrist, but there are plenty of ailments it does work for. Read on and do check this out for yourself.

4 For those not familiar with healing, here is what Peter says:
 "Healing is the offering of universal energy with the specific aim of restoring balance to our energy or life force. With proper training, it is possible to send healing to any person or animal, anywhere in the world. We are trained to work in a wide variety of situations, giving healing, clearing people and houses of negativity, energies, and attachments. we regularly help people with inherited generational trauma and are also used to working in ethnic communities lifting curses etc."

5 So, what do people get from receiving healing? Peter explains that healing "allows the client to regain their own sense of balance and harmony." The effects of this may be a cure from an illness or disease. But alternatively, it may create a new attitude within the individual which allows them to deal with their circumstances differently.

Healing can be used to help with many aspects of life and health including:
 Improving connection to intuition
 Improving outcomes from surgery
 Pre- and post-surgery
 Clearing homes and businesses of negative energies
 Addiction

6 As I said, however, it isn't just people who benefit from healing, but animals. In particular, horses. Peter and Jo explain how they work with horses: "Healing and Communicating with horses are different disciplines but intertwined, because of the way we work... Horses think in pictures, so often the communication comes as pictures and sometimes as feelings and words. It is best if we have permission to access the owner's energy at the same time as some horses mirror their owners' energy. That way we can help to resolve relationship problems as well as physical problems... Horses generally love to receive healing." Jo even finds that horses can recognise her by her energy after she has sent them healing, even when she did so remotely!

7 One important question is: Is it necessary for someone to believe in healing in order for it to work for them? Peter and Jo's answer is that a lot of people try healing when they have no belief that it works - and are very pleasantly surprised. Of course, the fact that healing works for animals, too, is further evidence that belief is not necessary for it to work. Peter and Jo explain that often, when people come for healing, their energetic system is clogged up with a lot of debris and their connection to their Spiritual Self or Higher Self is quite weak. Stuck energy blocking the energetic system causes a lot of our health and life issues.

8 The thing that astonishes me is not that healing works - I already knew that from personal experience - but the effectiveness of "Distant" Healing. Peter and Jo report that studies in which humans receive healing in a hospital setting show that Distance Healing is even more effective than when the healer and the person receiving healing are in the same room!

9 Healing, Peter and Jo say, helps people to become more authentic, more inspired, and more honest with themselves and others.
"People use healing because it works, not because they believe or hope that it will."

10 In addition to Quantum Energy Healing, Peter also offers healing at the Oxford Street Therapy Centre in Wellingborough.
