A Different New World Order

2245 SA

Could this be the time when people of the world create a new and better world?

- 1 There is increasing talk of a New World Order and it emanates from the WEF and its supporters – which includes a number of governments around the world. But what these people have in mind for humanity has holes in.

Due to this - as is my wont – I like to reinvent the wheel occasionally but only when there is a need to. And here I firmly believe there is a need to. Two reasons:

1. The old system we are used to is far too inadequate
2. The new system the WEF want is far too inadequate
Not only is it inadequate, but it appears to hide a hidden agenda which is unlikely to be fair to all.

- 2 And there is the issue, ladies and gentlemen. The problem with the old system – and with the WEF's proposed new system – is that it is not fair to all. The question I started with is this.
Isn't it time we had a system that was fair to all people - and why can't we have that?

Answering my own question, I'd say this.

Yes – it is time we had a fair system – and we can have it – and will have it – directly we all decide to build it.

- 3 Well, you have already got the impression that I am dreaming here and contemplating the big stuff in life which, historically, has only been the job of politicians and the heavily rich elite types to consider. And we all know how well these politicians the world over - and the elite types - have managed and organised things to date.

The thing is - the world has changed at a storming pace over the last 200yrs. We have seen massive land and resources grabbed for personal gain. We have seen wars started by governments for exactly the same reasons. We have seen innocent people trampled on – killed even - in the process.

Looking forward - there is no indication that we are going to see humanity turn a significant corner for good. The reason being that there has been absolutely no change in how humanity is organised and managed.
But there could be!

If enough people with vision and determination to both see and have a better World emerge – then humanity could turn that significant corner for good.

For me – it begins with a desire for change. Politicians and the self-appointed elite types of this world, will be on their own with this. For pretty much everyone else – the desire will be for a major change in how humanity organises and manages its affairs here on planet Home!

Most politicians and certainly the elite types are comfortable enough. Money is of little consequence - since they generally have more than they could possibly spend in several lifetimes. The same two groups of persons instead have a greater desire for control. That is, control over us – the People – and control over their personal influence in the world. Every day the media is populated with these controls being exercised over us all – without any regard for how the People feel.

For the rest of us – we are all consumed with the basics of life.

- Keeping our heads above water
- Keeping our families fed and watered
- And generally staying alive for as long as possible

Whether we're talking about Mr and Mrs Jones of Lingfield in Surrey or Mr and Mrs Touray of Brikama in West Africa – both will be consumed with the same basics in life. The only difference between them being the economies and social constructs in which they live. Both will have intense love for their families and an overwhelming desire for peace and stability in all things.

- 4 And peace and stability in all things is not what the politicians and the elite types have delivered. That being so, I suggest that it is time now to place the world on a different footing. That footing involves the Jones' and the Tourays of this world taking a keen interest and involvement in how things are done.

If the Jones' and the Tourays have as their goals the successful achievement of the basics in life – coupled with mutual respect and regard for one another then, hey – we have, as a race of humans – a wonderful opportunity to create a Different World Order where we are all one people – living freely and happily in harmony.

- 5 Am I the only one dreaming of this? Or do you too have that desire to see something like this emerge in our world?

One person relayed this quote to me once.

If you believe it is impossible to achieve – you will be right!

Alternatively...

If you believe it IS possible to achieve – you will be right again.

So where are YOU on this – my fellow human?

- 6 I thought I would indulge in a little fantasy game here. I thought it would be fun to just note down a few basics of life in an effort to identify a few basics! The point is – if we want to achieve something in life, we have to be able first to see it in our mind's eye. If we cannot envision it, then how can we possibly move to the point of creating it?

*To desire it is to have it.
To have it is to make it.
To make it – we first have to see it.*

So here I have started a basic list of the things We Don't Want – followed by a list of the things We Do Want. I say we in the universal sense of the word and believe that what I include is justified and rightly inclusive.

The lists could - I believe - be almost endless. That said, because we are considering here the basics of life then the lists can be amazingly simple and short. Let's see what I came up with in just a few minutes.

7 WE DON'T WANT

- Wars and conflicts - which are detrimental to all life
- Politicians that think more of themselves than the people they serve
- Governments being the only source of ideas for change
- Self-appointed elites dictating government policy and life generally
- Ever-expanding gulfs between the haves and the have nots.
- Corruption and dishonesty at any level

8 WE DO WANT

- Freedom of speech and freedom to travel
- Fairness in all things – including the justice system
- A system of justice based upon Natural Law and fairness
- Access to trusted health care and quality education systems
- Stability in the supply chain of all things and in the world economies
- Enough shelter, food and water for everyone without risk of shortage
- Opportunity to pursue personal ambition for personal and mutual gain
- Everyone to have respect and mutual care for the environment
- More direct involvement in the affairs that affect us all
- A People's Council - of the People - working for the People
- Governments serving as contractors enacting the People's wishes
- Truth and transparency in all matters

9 One expression I used above, which might be new to many, is "Natural Law". All of us will be familiar with Statute Law – made by governments – and Common Law – made by the courts based upon precedent. Natural Law is an interesting principle with its foundations in ancient history.

I include here an extract of a simplified description of the principle - published by Investopedia – What is Natural Law?

Natural law is a theory in ethics and philosophy that says that human beings possess intrinsic values that govern their reasoning and behaviour.

Natural law maintains that these rules of right and wrong are inherent in people and are not created by society or court judges.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- The theory of natural law says that humans possess an intrinsic sense of right and wrong that governs our reasoning and behaviour.
- The concepts of natural law are ancient, stemming from the times of Plato and Aristotle.
- Natural law is constant throughout time and across the globe because it is based on human nature, not on culture or customs.
- This is opposed to theories that laws are socially constructed and created by people.
- Examples of natural laws exist in several fields from philosophy to economics.

Understanding Natural Law

Natural law holds that there are universal moral standards that are inherent in humankind throughout all time, and these standards should form the basis of a just society.

Human beings are not taught natural law per se, but rather we "discover" it by consistently making choices for good instead of evil. Some schools of thought believe that natural law is passed to humans via a divine presence.

Examples of Natural Law

Examples of natural law abound, but philosophers and theologians throughout history have differed in their interpretations of this doctrine. Theoretically, the precepts of natural law should be constant throughout time and across the globe because natural law is based on human nature, not on culture or customs.

When a child tearfully exclaims, "It's not fair [that]..." or when viewing a documentary about the suffering of war, we feel pain because we're reminded of the horrors of human evil. And in doing this, we are also providing evidence for the existence of natural law. A well-accepted example of natural law in our society is that it is wrong for one person to kill another person.

- 10 The world stands at the fork in the road. The people of the world have had shown to them – in stark reality – the inadequacies of all the systems currently in place – and put in place by those in government. Those in government have shown themselves to be inadequately equipped at best and woefully inept – or corrupt – at worst.

This is truly a special moment in time when people of the world can come together in a way that has never been possible before – for reasons that have never been clearer before. A Different World Order can be created for every man, woman and child on the planet – for the whole of humanity now and in the future. All it requires of us is to recognise the moment and...
...to act!

And in terms of what "TO ACT" means – I will return to the subject soon. But here's a warning. Nothing – and I mean nothing – is achieved without two main ingredients.

1. Intention to have change
2. Effort to realise that change

Pleasantly neither ingredient needs to cost money.
– sometimes, just time and effort alone.

The ultimate reward however – could take us all – way beyond our wildest imaginings for a great future – for us and for our children!
