This Total Gender Madness

2135 ID

This is all slightly bonkers – and it has me worried for our kids

1 If you are anything like me, you are becoming increasingly confused by what is going on in the world of gender I/D.

2 There seems to be no end to the unbelievable stories emanating from mainstream media - pushing an agenda which appears to want us all to identify as something other than – male or female. Instead, somewhere along the ABCDEFG string of substitute identities.
It is madness at one level – but deeply concerning at another.

3 This article begins with the recent story about Lia Thomas – who began life and college in the US as male. During 2018 Lia announced her transition and adopted her new female name, Lia in January 2020.

is an American swimmer and student at the University of Pennsylvania. In 2021 and 2022, her athletic achievements as a trans woman became a point of public debate about transgender women in sports.

4 There is nothing wrong with this per se. People in my book can be anything they wish – unless there is some unhealthy agenda about their intentions. And there's been some of those reported in other places, including the UK.

My only question on this particular element is - why? Why are there so many people transitioning now? Twenty or more years ago, it was barely heard of. Now it seems like an everyday thing - causing adults – and non-adults - to quietly check with themselves – “Am I still OK with what I've got?”

5 GB News was among those who covered the story about Lia. This hulk of a swimmer took first place in a major 500m freestyle college swimming event – for women. And one of those women was a recent Olympic medallist.

Just looking at her - Lia - things didn't look right. Her name is Lia – officially – but her physique appears entirely male. Her voice – doesn't need a mention.

I understand entirely how the biological female swimmers must have felt.

State of Florida governor Ron DeSantis refused to recognise Thomas' win for reasons I can understand. Ron DeSantis is one of the few outspoken politicians who seems to have a clear head on things. He has become well known for his comments running contra to Biden's Covid narrative.

These are the medallists in Lia's swimming race – Lia is the one on the left.

6 The thing is – the very puzzling thing is – that few people seem to be saying anything about this. You might think the whole sporting fraternity might be blowing whistles by now – at least the swimmers. But no. It is as if someone above – and heaven knows where – is saying, “shush” leave it be.

Who might do that be – and why?

Does this sound entirely fair to you? It certainly doesn't to me. But with that said, to have a male-female trans event, does sound fair. Such an event assumes you can find enough people like Lia to participate. My worry – and I will call it that – is that there will be enough and they will be found.

7 Sticking to sport, take a look at this recent story covered by GB News. Emily Bridges - cyclist - previously set the Junior Men's national record for 25 miles in 2018, before telling the public that she now identifies as trans. Emily will now push out biologically defined women cyclists from Team GB to compete as a woman. And no one seems to raise an objection to this.

Sharron Davis - swimming medallist in the 1980 Olympic Games - also speaking on GB News, had a word to say on the matter. It included, that millions are spent seeking out competitors with unfair advantages due to drugs – but trans women can just walk in. It is not right – and I agree with her.

Speaking about the unfairness of what's going on Spiked had this to say:

“Many women are understandably irked at the fact that someone with the advantage of having a male body is being allowed to snatch titles from young women who have trained so hard for a shot at glory. Before she decided to change her gender, Thomas was an average male swimmer – ranking 554th in the men's freestyle competition. As a trans woman, however, Thomas has just beaten Emma Weyant, an Olympic-medal winner.

But the real scandal is not that Thomas is competing with women who cannot physically match her – it's the response from commentators who normally like to bleat about the importance of fairness in sport.”

So, people, what is really going on?

8 My other worry is that I and others, do not understand why this is happening. If it is natural and down to nature - then OK, there we are. If on the other hand, it is down to something else – like unintended or intended gene altering manipulation by some cause or other – then where will it end?

9 Last year I had the occasion to enter into a conversation with three teenage girls in a local town. The subject was inconsequential, but the thing which struck me between the eyes was their admission. Two of the three girls said they identified as boys. This was a random sample of teenage girls and I had to wonder this. What could the class population percentage possibly be? Stone me I thought – what on earth is going on with our kids?

Is there something in the milk these days, causing these effects - and in the process causing immense mental trauma for our kids whilst they try and deal with what's going on with them? Is there something in the vaccines - which they take a string of these days – causing the effect? Personally, given what has been discovered about the contents of vaccines in the last 15mths, my own investigations would have to start right there.

To say I don't trust Big Pharma is perhaps an admitted understatement – but I'm truly happy to be proved wrong – and hope to God I am. That said, if there is an unnatural cause for what's going on in the gender department, then I still want to know what it is – for everyone's sake – and soon!

10 Here is another worry.

An independent primary level tutor I was speaking with recently knocked me over with a feather. The tutor described how her 8yr old charge had admitted that according to his teacher, in a state school – and the police – he could wake up one day as a girl. I'm not sure where the police fitted into this story, but it takes the sense of dread to another level for me.

Another comment from this poor little innocent chap – clearly worried by such a thing happening to him – suggested that:

“Just because you have a willy – it doesn't mean you are a boy”.

I felt totally traumatised myself at hearing this, and you might have the same questions in your head as I had in mine – and still do!

It occurs to me that this is a major thing in the classroom these days and it starts at an early age. Someone needs to be asking questions - and answers need to be put on the table - and soon.

11 The fact that there is next to nothing said about this phenomenon – shall we call it – in the mainstream media, concerns me greatly. It is as if someone has been secretly spreading a message – saying, “shush” leave it be.

Given the nefarious nature of events over the last 2yrs or so, I rather believe the government knows a good deal about this subject – as quite clearly, they are instructing teachers in the classroom on how to deal with it.

So, back to it – who is asking the questions about this – other than us?

12 Speaking of questions – this is becoming truly laughable really.

A question was asked of PM Johnson last week, in the Commons, on the subject of gender. It has become necessary it seems! The question was followed up with another to the Chancellor on Talk Radio. How is it that the definition of a woman has now become as difficult a thing to describe as String Theory for the average non-physicist in the street?

Have a listen/read of these three:

Boris Johnson

Rishi Sunak: This guy refused to define a woman as an adult female!

And to make up the threesome I add:

Keir Starmer: This guy has a strange view about people without a cervix.

13 To conclude on this subject, I have to ask myself this.

Is it possible that there is something going on - at a level I could only guess at – which is about an intention to ruin sport as we know it? I know it's nuts.

But then, the government over the last two years appears to have done its best to ruin life for everyone. Lockdowns haven't worked – in fact they have

- crippled businesses and their owners in the hospitality industry
- cancelled sporting and cultural events
- prevented us all from socialising
- imprisoned our old folk

OK, some would say for good reason - and that is what the government have been telling us. But the underlying reality says something quite different.

We have to consider that the C19 thing has killed far fewer than the government has admitted to us. 17,000 and not 170,000.

These numbers came from the government's own records - but have only become revealed thanks to a Freedom Of Information Request.

C19 mainly struck those over 86yrs of age and we all had a 99.6% chance of surviving it if we got it anyway. And children didn't get it except very rarely! The government has done it's best to hide these facts.

And then there are the cheap, available and safe cures – which the government hasn't wanted us to know about.

Take a look at this article on the subject if this part interests you.

How Does He Sleep At Night?

The government has forced the needle into our arms instead.

And here I return to Big Pharma.

What could be in those needles – and could the general vaccines, given to children these days, account for what we are seeing in sport and elsewhere?

The government has been far from honest with us - and deep searching questions need to be asked – about everything!

I will for now keep to the script and ask - the question - why are we having this total gender madness?
