Is Free Energy A Problem?

TB-6385B

Free energy comes in different forms - but there seems to be a problem with it!

- 1 When one thinks of free energy, the mind bends to envisioning solar panels, wind turbines and tidal flows. In all these examples the energy is Free – but the supporting infrastructures all come at huge cost – Not Free!

And under that cost heading – whether the Energy is free or not – is the cost of moving it to where it's needed. Overhead cables and such like, carry a cost too! The amazing thought to hold in your mind now, however, is this. What if Free Energy meant Free in all respects. That is, Free to generate and Free to move. Now that would be something – it really would be something!

- 2 Dr Steven Greer [2a] is a bit of an authority on this subject, like certain others. In a short video, he explains the history of a discovery by Nicola Tesla – the Zero-Point Energy discovery - and the way in which it can be used, such as to power a car, as it did in the early 1900s. Also explained is the way this discovery came to nothing. The reason being – strangely - the lack of a cost! JP Morgan – an American financier – wasn't taken with Tesla's discovery, because he couldn't make money from the electricity it generated – for Free.

And that – very simply - is just about where we are today. Zero-Point Energy is a thing. It exists – it works – and has virtually no cost attached to it. So, the question in your mind right now is – why don't we have it today – 100yrs on?

- 3 Well, the truth is, we don't as a population, because the energy companies would have disappeared long ago as a result. Given the massive grip which both the energy multi-nationals and banks have over governments - and all the populus – they could rightly see the writing on the wall. It was clearly in these controllers' financial interests to derail any such inventions.

Positive steps forward in technology like this one, would challenge the control that these parties had established for themselves over numerous decades. History has shown, they were not going to give up on that control. And so, the discoveries and allied inventions – Tesla's and others – were thus buried. As a result, the whole of the world's population and its ecology – has paid the price ever since. And still does to this day!

This somewhat crazy circumstance will continue until the truth of these discoveries is widely known, coupled with a change in worldwide corporate and government controls that are currently exercised over people. That is, controls which are predicated on an unchecked system of monetary gain for small groups of industry oligarchs and their close, in-hand, investors.

- 4 Speaking of the inventions being buried – due to the very high stakes in play here, a number of inventors have actually also been buried. It seems, if inventors don't heed the warnings given – often by men in black suits – to cease their work, bad things can happen. But not all have died in suspicious circumstances. Some live to tell the tale today – like Maxwell Chikumbutso. Details of just some of these inventors are listed in the section below, where they're described as – Suppressed Energy Inventors.

Interestingly, Maxwell Chikumbutso features in the wonderful documentary called THRIVE II [4a]. It's believed, Maxwell is still alive – many are not [4b]

- 5 Another important point not to overlook here, is this one. Imagine if the whole world enjoyed free energy. Household energy bills would plummet – along with those bills for just about everything else anyone buys. The reason being, that the price of almost all purchases that people make of consumer goods – monthly or periodically – carries a large cost due to energy content. That's an energy expense incurred in the making and transporting the products to the consumer. People's disposable income would skyrocket.

If governments keep citizens under financial pressure each month, in theory, they can control the citizens through the money they have at their disposal. Without that control, governments can only guess what might happen with so much disposable income – if it became available to everyone. Clearly there would be a massive upset in the global financial markets, the effects of which would be difficult to imagine let alone control. It appears that governments, banks and the global energy multi-nationals did not want to take the risk of finding out. A risk – to their monetary cost – we presume!

- 6 Now, if the above wasn't enough to think about – there is something else.

Over the last ten years or so – in the time frame electric cars have really moved into the marketplace – many have wondered how the energy companies would cope with the massive increase in electricity demand needed to power all these carbon-free modern cars. I confess, I cannot recall a single story, or theme, which suggests, that this incredibly steep rise in demand for electricity – to replace petrol and diesel – was going to be a problem to solve. I don't believe it's been talked about.

No mention of new power stations being required – oil, gas or wood fired – and no new nuclear power stations to be brought on-line. And coupled to this, I cannot recall the oil giants ever squealing about these developments. Developments which are leading to a massive falling off in demand for their oil-based products - petrol and diesel. So, here's the thing.

Is the massive upswing in electricity demand for electric vehicles, across the whole planet, being served in a completely new way? Is it feasible to imagine, that the increased demand has been satisfied by the use of a hidden discovery – the tapping into Zero-Point Energy?

Well, over the years there has been a wealth of discoveries around the subject – successful trials and proofs of related inventions. Is it not feasible then to surmise, that the additional massive demand for electricity might have been served in this way? It would mean, of course, that the strategy has been kept secret – and kept secret by a whole host of key groups occupying positions in high office. It would also mean, that the population – the world's population - has been paying for generated electricity, which has been generated Free. A small point perhaps - but kept secret from us all? This is a point to sit with for a moment. Could this actually be true?

Persons with a grasp of the numbers could – and will I'm sure – place a light on the actual reality of what's been going on, by calculating the production numbers. For now, however, I leave you with this Thought Byte to ponder on.

- Why have all these discoveries been covered up?
- Why have inventors been derailed in their work – and even killed?
- Why are people still being controlled by a tiny group of money men?
- How's the increased demand for electricity – for cars etc – being met?

PS1 THRIVE II, is a documentary by Foster and Kimberley Carter Gamble. This masterpiece of commentary exposes of all kinds of wonderful innovations. It is also purposefully uplifting in describing what's possible to achieve for humanity, if people turn their minds to achieving positive change.

PS2 It appears that Nikola Tesla was not the first to discover Zero-Point Energy - since hidden history suggests it was in use by the Tartarian Empire. The Tartarian empire was wiped from existence, in what seems like a global reset.
