It's Like A Mad, Mad, World!

2125 HA

This is a race of beings ripe for a step-change in their society's development

- 1 I find the pastime of observation a generally interesting one – since it causes me to think about all kinds of things. For one, the actual thing being observed and secondly all the other related aspects which slide into my view, due to the observation itself.
 - 2 In particular, I often take the view of an Off-World observer – asking myself what it is I see when I look down on all the odd behaviours – especially those of the so-called leaders of the world. Today, I share some of the stranger observations I have and ask – do you see what I see?
 - 3 Firstly, let me describe the position I pretend to take up when doing these Off-World observations of mine. The increasing number of ET observations – and related stories – caused me to wonder what these guys – if they truly exist – would think of us humans and how we all seem to get on so well. That's a joke, of course!
- I try to take up the position of an ET myself – an intelligent – evolved being – who is observing a race of less evolved beings, trying to find their path to a more awakened existence.
- 4 The human race has travelled a great distance in the last 2000 years and particularly in the last 200. The rate of growth and development has been almost exponential, and we can only stand and gasp at the increasing vertical nature of the line graph as it's projected into the next 100.
- Here we can envisage, flying cars, robot home-helps - like in the film, I, Robot - AI running everything, deliveries arriving by drone, Alexa being our home-support - quietly steering our lives - and heaven knows what beyond these things. Not forgetting Big Brother perhaps watching our every move – on the streets and in our homes via the lovely Alexa again and our smart TV screens. I'd like to feel excited by these developments and there was a time when I was. Now though, I view such things with a sense of heightened caution. Of course, the Big Brother thing is the complete and biggest NO NO!
- In one sense, all these developments in tech etc are designed to make our lives easier and in many cases cheaper. Easier, possibly, cheaper, unlikely. Perhaps more fun and rewarding in some way? Don't bet on it. More exciting computer games maybe - if virtual violence continues to be the main draw for gamers. Beyond that, I remain to be impressed – and hope I will be.

Let's look now though at the world as it looks to me today.

5 I'd like to look firstly at how people are reacting to the Ukrainian situation.

The first point to mention is that the cry from the UK government to its people - to home Ukrainian refugees - is a great call. There has been a great reaction to that call and it confirms to me - as an Off-Worlder - that the ordinary humans, at least, are compassionate and caring.

What I'm puzzled by though is the incongruent nature of these humans. Citizens of the UK have jumped at the opportunity to help their fellows from another country - but the reaction to non-Ukrainians has been very different.

Admittedly, their government hasn't asked its citizens to house the boat people from Africa and elsewhere - arriving as they are in their hundreds every week on the shores of Kent. Neither has the government offered each household £350 per month for taking a boat person in. The same government have not considered it appropriate to offer the local council £10,000 for every recent arrival from across the English Channel who establishes a residence in their jurisdiction.

So, the UK government has a different attitude to the boat people compared with the Ukrainians - made clear by the monetary incentives to home Ukrainians - and only Ukrainians!

These particular refugees - or migrants arriving by boat - are not displaced by war and conflict unlike the Ukrainians - but they are technically still homeless. Perhaps the difference is that the boat people have chosen to be homeless - whilst they look for a new home in their chosen destination. Perhaps this is the difference seen by the government and by its people.

Then there are the home-grown homeless people. According to the charity The Big Issue - there are more than 220,000 and the number is rising annually. These people originate in the UK and they too need help. But there is no real evidence of that help being provided by government or anyone - other than by certain charities, supported as they are by their donors with big hearts and capacity to help.

So, looking down on this situation has left me confused about how these humans really feel towards their fellow beings. They are warm to some, but not to others. Is it all about the financial reward - that £350 incentive - if that's what it is, an incentive - or is the disconnect due to something else?

6 I am led to think - that the problem might be related to how the UK government wants all its people to think. What I see all too clearly is that people's reaction to government policy appears supported - and moreover - reinforced by the various large media platforms. It appears that all the major news outlets regurgitate their government's message almost without a single alternative view being expressed.

The odd thing is, these humans have set up their society with what they believe is a free press – where it's believed that journalists report on the truth whatever that truth is. But all the journalists ever say – is basically the same thing. In fairness, the journalists I'm talking about are those who work for the major platforms. And that appears to be the problem. Those platforms are either orchestrated directly by their controlling government or owned by large corporate investors – who appear to dictate what news they wish people to hear and read – irrespective of the truth sometimes.

Have a look at this video, Busted.

Take a specific look first at this point in the video.

At 15min 20sec we are shown how all the news scripts – across a multitude of different news platforms – albeit in the USA – are all coordinated.

The demonstration of unity here is mindboggling – even for an Off-Worlder!

The position is quite different with these journalists compared to those who are truly independent. The independent journalists attempt – at least – to investigate the stories and report the news in a fair and truthful way. The fact that these independent journalists are often attacked by the major news platforms, the social media – who are also owned by large corporate investors – and the government, indicates that all is not well in this human society. Not only is compassion strangely steered by the government and the supporting media – but the media itself appears to be steered to spread a particular singular message.

Some humans appear to see through this apparent strategy – hence their interest in – and following of – the challenging views of the smaller media platforms and their independent journalists.

In the case of Ukraine for example, the major platforms have all been united behind the government. The story the platforms tell are all in agreement and support whatever the government says. The smaller platforms are the only ones which tell a different side to the same story – except for one perhaps!

And as for that different side – I see there is a lot to be read about it, but – it is not being spoken about, challenged, or even disagreed with. It is just being ignored. This is disturbing to me – and I wonder what good can come of it?

- 7 Another observation I have found to be disturbing – in fact even more disturbing than the above – is the language used by the current world leaders in relation to Ukraine.

Many of these leaders have never been involved in human war and conflict themselves. Despite this, and not understanding the reality of conflict to any degree, they all seem to speak the same speak. One leader, in particular, speaks of there being a World War 3 – involving nuclear weapons. He does this without seemingly having the first clue as to what damage that would bring to the human race, every living entity on the planet – the planet itself – and even the fabric of space in which this planet floats. None!

But that leader - and a host of others - now speak of World War as if it was a normal response to disputes between nations. These leaders use what some would describe as playground language. They act like adolescents – still to learn from mistakes, experience and their wise elders. They don't act in the least like true leaders do.

Many people will remember clearly the events leading up to the Iraq war. The prominent leaders at the time were Bush and Blair. In essence, they were determined to start that war and did so on a false premise. The film Official Secrets provides a clear window on events at the time, thanks to one brave lady speaking out as a whistle-blower – Katherine Gun. Under police questioning – she says:

"I work for the British people. I don't gather intelligence so the government can lie to the British people."

A recent opinion editorial wrote this about Bush, Blair, the Iraq war and the current conflict in Ukraine.

- 8 But what concerns me even more than that, is this. The majority of the people – these leaders so-call lead - don't recognise their current leader's shortcomings.

These people believe what their leaders are telling them and many – speak out themselves in support. They actually call for war themselves.

I have to say, witnessing this as I do from my cloud-base, it is not the behaviour of an Intelligent Grown-Up Society. Such a society takes many eons to develop. They make many mistakes on the way and get through many leaders – before the dawn of a new age of enlightened behaviour. It occurs to me that the human race has some way to go yet. But that is only possible if these humans prevent their current leaders from instigating war – and certainly war of the nuclear type.

Unless there is a miraculous waking up of the people – a waking that alerts them to the mistakes which are about to be made by the current leaders – there will be no future for this race of humans. This awakening could though happen - and I pray that it does and very soon.

- 9 There is one other thing which slides into my view whilst I observe these humans. The current leaders are not talking about peace and reconciliation with regard to the Ukraine conflict. By talking only of raising the stakes, they are successfully raising the fear levels in the whole world population.

A true leader – a leader from an Intelligent Grown-Up Society – would firstly never allow such a situation to develop in the first place. If it did, such a leader would do all in their power to deescalate the tension and spread calm and confidence in the people. All the while, that leader's efforts would be seen by all. On planet Earth, I am not seeing any evidence this. But then, I'm not looking at an Intelligent Grown-Up Society where the leaders behave as true leaders.

Let me consider another view on this theme.

- 10 If it were accepted that the current leaders were all above average intelligence and therefore clearly understand the realities of their actions and non-actions - and particularly their carefully chosen words - then perhaps we are looking at something far more worthy of our close attention.

What if these current leaders know exactly what they are doing and are clear about their purpose – perhaps their combined purpose if they are working together? Could that purpose be is to raise fear levels among all the people of the world.

For what purpose you will ask?

Good question.

As George Orwell so eloquently illustrated in his novel “1984” - as others have - the raising of fear in the population is by far the easiest and most effective way of increasing control and restrictions over all the people.

The reaction to the C19 event could perhaps illustrate all of this so very well. But was the reaction to an unfortunate release of a killer virus – the C19 event – a natural and expected reaction? As the worldwide restrictions and lockdowns were presented to the people, the leader's responses were seen as sensible. The measures inflicted on the people were seen as justifiable reactions to the event. – and the people of the world have largely accepted them as such. The big question remains as to whether or not it was a planned release? Now there's a thing – left aside for now!

But the small media platforms - and their independent journalists - have seen it all differently. In fact, very differently and to the point where their views, arguments and calls for a wide public debate - on the whole C19 event and the counter strategy - have all been blocked in one way or another. Now that is strange – looking at it from my position. This is not the behaviour of an Intelligent Grown-Up Society – some would fairly say.

To imagine that the current world leaders are working to an agenda – involving raising fear levels – would be quite a concept to take onboard. That said, the current world leaders are though working to an agenda. It's called Build Back Better.

Now much of what the WEF says about this reads well. But everyone is advised to take a deeper dive on this topic and connect some of the dots. First to reveal is that world governments are all agreed about this. Told you it was a FIRST!

That agenda has been made very public by the World Economic Forum – WEF. The founder Klaus Schwab – in fact publicly states that the C19 event has given the world a unique opportunity to redefine how we all live. The problem for many, is that his description of how we will all live – in a Build Back Better world - doesn't make for pleasant reading. It does read better though if you happen to be one of the self-appointed elites in the world.

In fact, it reads much better than you could possibly imagine.
The idea is that the people – the non-elite – will own nothing and be happy.
It suggests that the elite – will own everything – and be even happier.
The WEF don't hide this idea and you can read about it for yourself.

It is interesting to note, that Klaus Schwab published his book on the agenda in June 2020 – Covid19: The Great Reset. The timing was uncanny, given that the plan he details in its text was based on an opportunity presented by the C19 pandemic.

That pandemic was only declared as being such just 3mths earlier by the World Health Organisation – WHO - in March 2020.

That is truly moving fast – assuming it wasn't already pre-planned!

The WEF, Klaus Schwab and all the major players in this organisation – and there are many - all with massive bank accounts – deserve a detailed study.

What is to be found in such a study gives us all – with titchy bank accounts – a great deal to think about at best – and deeply concerned about at worst.

But we shall leave that for another day.

- 11 These observations - I find - raise interesting and searching questions and I leave it to others to ponder further on these particular views.

Given the curious idea that governments could be working in a kind of lockstep arrangement – with a common agenda in mind as I mentioned above – there is a particular view expressed by another observer.

Have a look at this story. It is stunning - almost beyond belief - but will go some way to answering a number of questions some will already be thinking about. It will raise a number more – as you will see. Understanding the human history described will open minds to previously unimaginable things!

- 12 From where I'm placed, it really does look like a Mad, Mad world.
Humans might do well to change their current leaders for true leaders.
And soon!

PS: True leaders are Servant Leaders and lead without ego.
