

BBC

One Rule 4U And A Tiny One 4Me

2165 LC

What we all need is a completely New start – based on New World Thinking

1 How many times have each of us heard the above title or version of it – “It’s one rule for us and another one for them.” More times I fancy that we would wish to count.

2 The thing is – apart from the almost fun nature of the line – there is a very real element of truth about it. Last week the Party-gate stories came to a head - centred on No 10 and other gov’t offices – with the MET police issuing token fines to the accused found guilty. No fines issued for the crime of lying -yet!

3 At the end of last year, I wrote about this Party-gate story when it became a noise on the block. You can read it here - It's One Rule 4U And None 4Me.

At the time PM Johnson was using all the tricks we have seen him play to deflect the focus and confuse the picture. Do you recall him putting in place the Cabinet Secretary, Simon Case, to investigate the goings on in his house? Well, Simon quickly resigned from that charge, thinking it was better to do so in view of the fact that he too had been organising parties in his own office.

Step up Sue Gray to take his place, who was then handed the poisoned chalice to complete the job. Oh dear, this was not going to end well, as it seemed Sue appeared to have integrity and would report things as they really were. And before she could report things as they really were, PM Johnson took back the chalice and gave it to the MET police.

Rishi Sunak at the time was eyeing his chances for moving next door on the basis the PM was about to have his backside bitten by all the vipers who do not have him on their own good time party lists!

How very clever to involve the MET, I thought at the time. This was not going to end with BoJo and his fellow party goers against the firing squad wall – at least not yet. If the MET were going to emerge from this pincer move, then they would surely have to come out with something – something like a slap on the wrist – and perhaps no more than that.

And just that they managed.

Although it is still to be made clear how many fines have been issued by the MET – and who to exactly – we already know enough to determine this is a complete farce.

4 As I write today, it's PMQ day in parliament and PM BoJo is facing a different firing squad sitting on the opposite benches in the House of Commons. Opposite number, Sir Keir Starmer, will be well stocked with ammunition to fire at the man - and he will only be one of a serious number who will be wanting to do the same. How much of it will the Speaker actually allow remains to be seen. Speaker Sir Lindsay Hoyle will be careful in his role to protect the establishment - of course.

But yesterday, BoJo got winged by some friendly fire, shot from the same side of the house. The MP started kindly, then said, he - the PM - was not worthy of holding the high office he did. That came from fellow Tory member, Mark Harper, who delivered what should amount to being a stinging blow. But these things rarely amount to such, as we all know. BoJo in response to Mark, said he regretted the situation but - hey, let's now sweep all this under the carpet shall we - forget it in other words - because we have other important work to get on with. And more cover to find, I would judge - since this topic is not going to blow over quickly, if at all.

5 In my previous article I wrote this:

Opposition leader Sir Keir Starmer in PM questions on wed08dec21 afternoon spoke of this:

Whilst these two-dozen people were letting their hair down at the No10 party, there were people in hospital dying. The mother of one woman he cited, was dying when she herself couldn't be allowed in to be with her - due to the very restrictions which Prime Minister Boris Johnson had put in place.

Starmer went on to say, that people responsible for organising and attending Christmas parties at the very same time as the No10 party was happening last year, were - as he spoke - were in court in London to receive their penalties for doing so.

Starmer asked the PM if the people concerned would be similarly treated? Interestingly, PM BoJo said yes. Strangely - or rather not so strangely - he also said that he didn't know what had happened that night in his own house and has asked the cabinet secretary to investigate. [That was Simon Case].

It sounds as though PM BoJo wasn't in attendance, or - if he was - perhaps he was unaware of what was happening around him as he was slightly sloshed in a corner somewhere.

6 I'm grateful to the supposedly honourable MP for raising these issues - since I have a similar issue to raise with the PM myself.

Let's look at the case of minister Brandon Lewis MP and Jason Elworthy. Brandon Lewis - no doubt courting favour with his boss - attempts to play down the seriousness of PM BoJo getting collared by the law and shown up for it. Brandon equates the penalty meted on PM BoJo to a light traffic offence. He is effectively saying, many have had them - so what's the big deal?

He might have used the analogy of a parking ticket – but he made it sound worse by upping the crime to a speeding offence. Calculated I'd say!
And the penalty?
Well, it amounted to a token £50.

We will all have to see where this ends for PM BoJo, but I am given to wonder if that end might be any different if the token fine hadn't been £50. Let's wonder what might have happened if the fine was, say £12,000.

Jason Elworthy, was clearly as afraid of the talked about virus as PM BoJo and his mates were. It was safe for the PM to have parties – numerous parties – and Jason thought exactly the same. As covered by The Guardian - at the time of his party, with 500 of his mates present, Jason said,

"Ascot racecourse was preparing to welcome thousands of racegoers, and football crowds would soon be gathering to watch the Euros. "No one cared. Everyone was mixing," he says. "I'm not going to have people govern me when firstly they don't even abide by their own governance, and secondly that governance is flawed". Elworthy, who has had Covid twice, agrees there was a "limited necessity" for restrictions to stop it spreading, but is suspicious of the science".

Jason has made some very good points here.

But as he says elsewhere, people were suffering mentally and needed to get out and socialise. Many as we know have committed suicide due to the effects which isolation has had on some people. Jason was attempting to put something back in the lives of people – some of whom were literally at a breaking point.

So, this guy Jason gets a £12,000 fine and the PM gets a slapped wrist. This is enough – in fact it is far more than enough. It is time for a deep look at how government happens and who does the governing.

See the article published today titled: "New World Thinking – TFC2"

As you will see from The Guardian article, Jason is not the only unfortunate soul to find themselves on the wrong side of PM BoJo's Law. Chloé Gardiner in Northern Ireland fell foul of BoJo's Law when she and three others got together for a small discreet house party. £100 each, thank you.

Literally thousands of fines have been dished out by the over-eager police up and down the country. Even a lady having a quiet sandwich in her car alone was not immune to this treatment defined by BoJo's Law.

7 There is another point not to be missed here and it is one which stabs deep into the heart of PM BoJo, his government and the rest of parliament.

PM BoJo has led the country down his chosen path – following as he said – the science. The truth of that science and the truth of his actions and those of his advisors are set to explode! Without saying any more here, I will simply leave this point hanging with this.

There is another science which has only recently come to light.

Pretty much all the symptoms of C19 – the negative effects associated with the C19 vaccines – and the only treatments allowed to be given to C19 patients in hospital – under penalty of doctors losing their practising licence if they do otherwise – are all related to ONE curious toxin type.

That toxin is in each of the elements mentioned above. Furthermore, it is astounding to note, that in the USA, the UK and other countries, the senior medical advisors have each remained silent about the known treatments that have been effective in treating C19. Not only have they been silent about them, but those same treatments are known to be effective in dealing with that ONE curious toxin type – should you get some via another route.

PM BoJo has little to fear from the backlash he is likely to get down the days and weeks ahead – connected with his paltry £50 slap on the wrist. What he will be more concerned with is the news which is emerging now about the ONE toxin which is showing up everywhere. It will not be going away!

8 In the meantime,
there clearly is: One Rule 4Us And Something Far Less Painful 4Them.

Speaking of trust, the old saying I have come to love is this.

Trust is like virginity – once it's lost – It is Lost!

now followed by

Once Bitten – We Should Be Twice Shy!

CONNECT'S Maxim and Oath

Connect is only interested in finding and sharing the TRUTH.
In search of that TRUTH, we only pose questions – we have no answers.

By: David Charles

Source: Tetbury CONNECT: Magazine

- 3 LINK It's One Rule 4U And None 4Me
- 3 LINK Simon Case quits No 10 party probe amid rule breach claims
- 4 LINK Boris Johnson 'no longer worthy' of being PM, says senior Tory MP
- 6 LINK Minister compares PM party penalty to speeding fine
- 6 LINK Jason Elworthy fined £12000 whilst BoJo got £50
- 6 LINK New World Thinking – TFC2

FURTHER READING

- LINK "Trust In Me" the snake says, assuringly!
- LINK Lindsay Hoyle interrupts over jibe at 'Pinocchio' Boris Johnson

PLEASE DOWNLOAD AND SHARE THIS ARTICLE

Opportunity to join the CONNECT team and network

END